

CONTENTS

Foreword: Communication in the Agora

Introduction

1. COMMUNICATION AND DISCOURSE

1.1. The language – a means of identity- and social re-cognition

1.2. Speech acts

1.3. Man as a Dialogue-Dependent Being

1.4. Discourse and discourse structures

1.4.1. The structure and art of discourse

1.4.2. Philosophy as discourse

1.4.3. The heuristic discourse

1.4.4. The epideictic discourse

1.4.5. The ethical discourse

1.4.6. The scientific discourse

1.4.7. The educational discourse

1.5. Mass Communication: Information and Interaction

1.6 Media Communication: Scenario and Forms of Interaction

2. THE PUBLIC SPACE

2.1. A conceptual framework: public sphere and public space

2.2. Public space and discourse

2.3. Virtual communities and the reconstruction of media space

3. DIALOGUE

3.1. Dialogue and mediatized debate

3.2. The dialogue as a network of codes

3.2.1. The media device

3.2.2. The for-and-against televisual discourse

3.2.3. Media dialogue and self-awareness

3.2.4. Media dialogue and responsibility

3.2.5 The moderator's image and Socratic role

4. POLITICAL DISCOURSE AND ARGUMENTATION IN THE PUBLIC SPACE

4.1. Doxastic logic – the foundation of persuasion

4.2. Ideology, power discourse and authority

4.3. Rhetorical figures

4.4. Argumentation strategies

4.4.1 Discursive mechanisms

4.4.2 The political man in the agora

Conclusions

Bibliography