

Disputatio* – International Journal of Philosophy

Guidelines for Reviewers

Deadlines

Referees are given two months to review a submission.

Format

In addition to whatever comments they wish to be conveyed to the editors and authors, referees are asked to fill in Disputatio's report form.

Content

Referees are asked to classify submissions into one of the four categories: accepted, conditionally accepted, invited for resubmission after major revisions and rejected. If revisions are recommended, the same referee is asked to review the revised version.

Substantial comments are only required with a view to improving a submission that could eventually be published.

Referees should bear in mind that Disputatio makes available as much of their reports as possible to the authors. They should adopt a judicious tone in their assessment, but if a submission is of poor quality the report must indicate this.

Criteria

A submission accepted for publication in Disputatio should make at least one original (possibly negative) point with sufficient plausibility and rigour.
