Counteracting incidents of ghostwriting and guest authorship

DECLARATION

of the authors of the article entitled

Contribution of individual authors to the development of the publication:

1. Author’s title, academic degree, professional degree, first and last name - .......... % contribution

2. Author’s title, academic degree, professional degree, first and last name - .......... % contribution

3. Author’s title, academic degree, professional degree, first and last name - .......... % contribution

4. ......

Furthermore, the authors hereby declare that:
– the article has not been previously published or submitted for publication;
– the list of authors is not exclusive of any person who has made a significant contribution to the content of the article.

Authors’ signatures:

1. .............................................  2. ......................................... 3. .......................................

Instruction (excerpts from the Guidelines by the Ministry of Science and Higher Education):

Ghostwriting and guest authorship are opposing examples of scientific unreliableness. Ghostwriting denotes a situation in which someone has made a significant contribution to the development of a publication, without revealing their participation as one of the authors, or without their role being mentioned in the acknowledgements section of the publication. Guest authorship (honorary authorship) denotes a situation in which a person’s contribution is negligible or non-existent, and yet the person is listed as the author / co-author of the publication.