

Editorial policy

Acta Medica Marisiensis is a multidisciplinary journal devoted to publishing original scientific papers, review articles, case reports and reviews from medical sciences, as well as editorials, letters to the editor, commentaries and replies of the authors. The journal is peer-reviewed and is published 6 times a year in both paper and electronic versions. The language of Acta Medica Marisiensis is English.

All submitted manuscripts must be accompanied by a cover letter signed by all authors, stating that the article is original, is not under consideration or has not been previously published elsewhere. Authors document that their research was approved by the appropriate institutional review committee for the protection of human or animal subjects, and that all human subjects or their representatives gave informed consent.

All submissions are subject to peer review, and to language- and copy-editing after acceptance. At least two independent scientists act as referees of one manuscript. Reviewers evaluate manuscripts critically but constructively to prepare detailed comments about the research and the manuscript to help authors improve their work. The identities of the reviewers will not be released to authors. Reviewers are asked to make one of four recommendations: accept, accept after minor revision, accept after major revision, do not accept.

The decision to ask for revisions is made in light of the reviewers' comments and recommendations, and after evaluation by the Editor. The editor may reject manuscripts without outside review, for example if the subject matter is outside the scope of the journal, a manuscript on the same topic is just about to be published, the quality of the manuscript is poor, or criteria for the submission of manuscripts are not met.
