Publication Ethics

Our publishing policy includes peer-reviewing in order to:

- filter the scientifically acceptable papers,
- improve the quality of papers,
- avoid plagiarism,
- avoid multiple submissions.

Submitted papers should not be considered for publication by other journals. The author is responsible for obtaining, if needed, the permission for publication of peer authors or other institutional authorities.

Authors are required to prepare their paper carefully, including reference to any paper they used results from, well demarcating their own results.

In the unlikely event when we become aware of ethics violation, we do not hesitate to publish corrections, clarifications, even retract the paper with appropriate apologies, as the case may be.

We agree with COPE in promoting integrity in research publication.
